

This paragraph has a pretty plain initial or drop cap. It uses the default document font. You didn't really expect more detail with such a generic font choice, right? This may be exactly what you want, especially with modern typesetting styles which tend towards the minimalist.

“Never say never,” the saying goes. Someday your dropcap may include leading punctuation and a hanging indent. No worries. All you have to do is guess and fudge.

Another paragraph shows off a different line count. Note the droplet package supports a stand-off effect, but the feature has been broken for some time. Until this is fixed upstream, there is not a good way to demonstrate an effect comparable to other engines in Typst.